

K-Love has been an excellent source of good and uplifting music for the folks at my place of work. They appear to be more productive and encouraged.

I would be pretty disappointed if K-Love was not there. A case in point: while traveling for business recently in NYC, NY, I was unable to find a K-Love station. This was unusual and disappointing not to find a station that played their format!

While in New York, I helped a woman with her infant child in a baby buggy, lowering the child off a drugstore stoop. Her response was surprising because she acted as if an act of social kindness like that was not common in New York city. I wanted to cry (and she looked like she might, too).

National disasters and emergencies tend to draw us close as an American community, yet, let's not wait for those things. We need one another now. We just need to value one another and not take each other for granted. We are stronger as a nation when we stand together. K-Love promotes caring for our fellow Americans - despite political, racial, or economical differences. Thanks, K-Love, for being a part of keeping America up!
